

PETER DRYSDALE
Emeritus Professor
Asia Pacific School of Economics and Government
Building No. 13

Canberra ACT 0200 Australia
Telephone: +61 2 6125 5539
Facsimile: +61 2 6125 0767
Email: peter.drysdale@anu.edu.au
www.anu.edu.au

1 November 2005

I am very pleased to recommend eSUN Japanese language learning platform.

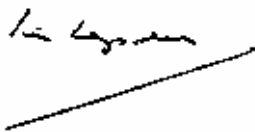

Since establishing ICI in 1987 as one of Tokyo's leading private professional Japanese language programs, Shigekatsu Yamauchi has devoted himself to perfecting Japanese language teaching programs that make language learning fun for young and old alike.

The result of years of careful investment and experimentation is a revolution in the application of electronic multi-media technologies to Japanese language learning.

Japanese is the largest second language under study in schools, colleges and universities throughout Australia. Australia has the largest density of Japanese language study of any country in the world with Japanese language and studies programs in every major university in the nation. They include a range of innovative Japanese language programs for students from all kinds of language backgrounds, involving in many cases the use of electronic multi-media technologies. The development of eSUN was subject to trial and assessment in this environment by language teaching specialists at the Australian National University. This is the kind of rigorous development to which eSUN has been subject and through which the system has been perfected.

What eSUN provides is an interactive language learning system that allows the student to structure his or her own learning program and evaluate progress on the way. It provides a mode for private language learning. But it also offers huge potential to complement classroom Japanese language programs in our colleges and universities throughout the world. The eSUN online language learning system represents a great leap in the technology and methodology of language learning.

I recommend eSUN to students and teachers of Japanese language in Australia and throughout the world. May you enjoy your learning of Japanese language with its support.

(Peter Drysdale)